

BIG News Flash – Spring Sprung!

Peru, Ma. – April 2013

Ah yes, the birds are chirping, the bees are buzzing, and its time for the curator to come out of hibernation. After a long cold winter the curator decided it was time to brighten up the displays for spring... or maybe he thought the ground crew needed some exercise after the long winter. In any case green had to replace brown so under close supervision the ground crew got right to work. So after much huffing and puffing the greens are now front and center.

In a rather uncharacteristic break with decorum the curator actually rolled up his sleeves (collar?) and lent a hand (mouth?) with the cleanup from the winter storms.

The curator also made a close inspection of some other recent changes and is probably busy coming up with more work for the ground crew.

Visit the BIG web site year round at <http://www.berkshireinsulatorgallery.org/>. Previous news releases and a calendar of upcoming events are included as well as a live BIG Webcam.